A LIVELY SHIPMENT

Hive of Honey Bees Was Sent on the Transport.

One of the liveliest exports ever sent out of Honolulu was taken away yesterday on the transport Sherman. It was a hive of Italian honey bees, containing an entire colony.

The hive was shipped by Entomologist D. L. Van Dine of the United States Experiment Station to the United States Bureau of Forestry in Manila. The bees will be used for experimental purposes on the Philippines to ascertain whether the Italian kind, domesticated in Hawaii, can be domesticated in the Archipelago.

The hive was supplied the Experiment Station by Mr. Rewcastle from his apiary on Kinau street.

Fell Off Bridge.

An unknown man, evidently under the influence of liquor, walked off the edge of the bridge over Nuuanu stream at an early hour this morning. A man passing by heard the splash and went to his assistance. Fortunately the water was not deep and the fellow clambered out not much the worse for wear. He refused to give his name.

THE Y. W. C. A. LADIES GIVE ANOTHER MINSTREL SHOW

People took time by the forelock last night in their zeal to get good seats at the Y. W. C. A. minstrel show. The room was crowded by a quarter to eight while many were on hand as soon as the doors opened at seven. It was a patient, good-natured, hilarious crowd too. The late comers took their inferior seats with cheery faces and not a frown or complaint marred the pleasure of the assembly.

Promptly at eight the curtain rose. There was a roar of laughter as the minstrels marched in solemn procession to their places, a clever trick planned, evidently to give the audience time to get over the first shock of introduction.

The tendency to impatience was allayed by the sudden appearance of Moanalua, safety pins and all, who, strange to say, made his way to the rear of the stage.

The Fambourine was beyond expression fine, while Jones left nothing to be desired in that line. Song:

It was not like this in the olden days—

Fambourine—"Say, Mr. Pratt, what's this big egg doing out here?"

Mr. P.—"I don't know."

Jones—"I know; it's the lay of the last minstrel."

Song—

That am the time when your troubles begin—

Miss G. Hall was capital and an encore was enthusiastically granted. Here are some of the jokes:

"We heard once on a time when the W. G. Hall had a close shave off Barber's Point."

"Sonny Cunha was twice as polite as Bert Peterson for he got up on the King street car and gave his seat to two ladies."

"A ladies' waist is like a bull dog because it is tied up all day and let loose at night."

Miss Lyle sang a charming song, Chloe, chorus by the company.

Miss Jones decided not to sing a song, but to exhibit her pet melodeon. She intended to play the "Carter March," but because of a protest decided on "Pedro," but the cards wouldn't work so an instrumental solo was elegantly rendered on the pet.

A heart-to-heart talk on the subject of Woman, followed by a piano solo on the organ, brought the show to Miss G. Hall again who said she had cheated the O. R. R. Being at Kahuku she bought a return ticket to Honolulu and has decided not to go back.

Song, "Here comes Carrie Nation." Each stanza was a keen, clever local hit introducing Gov. Carter, Capt. Ber-

The railway is being built by Japanese capital and was planned before the present war broke out as a means for carrying the growing commerce between Japan and the interior of Korea. In the latter part of February of this year, after hostilities with Russia had broken out, the stockholders held a meeting and decided to begin construction at once as a military measure because the line would furnish an easy route over which thousands of troops could be rushed from Japan to the front. Thousands of men have been working day and night ever since.
